Cooperative Research Network in Black Studies

The Cooperative Research Network (CRN) is a collective effort among scholars, committed intellectuals, and community activists to build Black studies on the dual goals of:

Academic Excellence and Social Responsibility.

The CRN is organized into networks of intellectuals, who share a common research focus, and who share resources and the results of their research as part of the professionalization of Black studies activities.

The Malcolm X Work Group (MXWG) is part of the CRN. Our efforts are to maintain a critical dialogue between serious students of Malcolm X, to assist in preserving documents and other material, and to publish material including a newsletter. Other CRN work groups exist on the Afro-American Novel, and Black Mississippians.
